NO POLITICS AT WILLAMETTE

Professor Drew Said to Have Been Ejected From the Chair of Greek and Latin Because of His Pernicious Activity in Local Politics—Sword of Damocles Hanging Over the Head of Professor Boyer Hereafter no member of the faculty of Willamette University will be permitted to be unduly active in the manipulation of partisan politics.

The removal of W. P. Drew, professor of Greek and Latin, by the board of trustees last evening, and the substitution of William E. Kirk, has settled that for all time.

It is asserted in various quarters that Prof. Drew was simply discharged for pernicious activity in political matters during the last primary election, and at sundry other times.

President Coleman, of the University, will neither deny nor confirm the story.

"I cannot talk on that matter," was the only reply the president would give when he was asked the direct question: "Was Professor Drew fired, and if so was it not for meddling in politics?"

Two years ago Professor Drew is said to have stirred up an agitation to close the saloons of Salem. At that time much feeling was created, and the University, as a school, came in for some criticism, because one of its professors was interfering a little too freely in the matters of the city. Many business men are said to have resented it. At that time there was some talk of removing the professor. President Coleman, while an advocate of temperance and morality, is said to have held the opinion that it is not in the province of a university professor to become active in local or other partisan politics, and he believed that the professor's action in regard to saloons closing and local option to be ill-advised.

It is said that the professor's next offensive stunt in party politics was during the last primary election. An alleged ministerial ticket was launched in Salem and Marion county, which contained the names of such of the candidates as were supposed to be most favorably disposed to Drew's views on local option and prohibition.

On this ticket are said to have been the names of Dr. James Withycombe, for governor, and Professor W. C. Hawley, for congress. While both these gentlemen received the nomination at the hands of their party, it is asserted that their names on this alleged ministerial ticket cost them hundreds of votes in Salem and Marion county, and was to their detriment all over the state.

Dr. Withycombe and Mr. Hawley are said to have regretted that they were placed on this so-called ministerial ticket, but they were in a position where they could not "sneak." They are said to have, figuratively speaking, thrown up their hands and cried: "Deliver us from our friends."

Prof. C. O. Boyer, who fills the chair of science, was re-elected at the meeting of the board yesterday. He is said by some to have run Drew a close second in the political game, and it is rumored on the streets that when the purification business was pulled off yesterday, that Professor Boyer was only saved by the skin of his teeth.

But when President Coleman was asked about these things, he shut up like the proverbial clam. He simply smiled and said: "You must not ask me this; I cannot speak of it."

On the streets of Salem the impression prevails that the board of trustees did a wise thing. For more than a decade there has occasionally been much caustic criticism that Willamette University was maintaining a propaganda for the dissemination of peculiar politics. There is no use in denying that this has hurt the University. During almost every political campaign of any importance, members of the faculty have taken the stump in behalf of partisan candidates. President Coleman, it is said, has deplored this, and finally put it up to the board in such a way that the University must either lose its able men or get rid of some of its most active ward politicians.

The board very wisely chose the latter course.

It is said that the board had no criticism whatever to make on the fact that Prof. Hawley accepted a party nomination for the office of representative in congress, but, on the other hand, is gratified at his success. It is the smaller and more local affairs that have been some times indulged in by members of the faculty that are particularly offensive.

The board is said to have taken the position that the oldest and most celebrated institution of learning on the Pacific coast has for a long time been made to play second fiddle to younger and less pretentious colleges, and that one of the causes was that certain members of the faculty paid more attention to ward politics than they did to the sciences and languages.

During some of the big political campaigns some of the professors on the stump and in the class room are said to have taken such a lively interest in the elections that members of some of the great political parties have declined to send their sons to the school.

On almost every hand the feeling seems to prevail that the University has given itself a new birth of freedom.
